Mr. Russo further stated he believes that few Americans appreciate the vast blessings that are theirs under the Stars and Stripes. He gave some interesting personal experiences, in connection with many from this area who have become naturalized. Mr. Russo also answered questions regarding his work as county detective.

Britain Cheered by Roosevelt Address

London, May 28.—Britain's government and people were jubilant today over President Roosevelt's radio address in which he reaffirmed that his promises to "deliver the goods" to Britain will be fulfilled.

Government authorities closely scrutinized the text of the speech and the proclamation of an unlimited emergency in the U. S. but decided to issue no official comment at present.

Authoritative quarters, however, stated that Prime Minister Churchill probably will seize the first opportunity to refer to President Roosevelt's address and indicated the British government's pleasure.

The decision to withhold for the moment any official comment was based on the belief that such a statement just now might be interpreted as British interference.

Authoritative London quarters pointed out the President's address primarily was a message to the people of the Americas. They added that "President Roosevelt's difficulties with his own people are thoroughly appreciated here."

British and Greeks Give Ground at Crete

London, May 28.—Exhausted by constant bombing attacks, British and Greek defenders of Crete gave ground slowly but surely today in the face of ever increasing Nazi attacks.

Authoritative quarters in London admitted "further deterioration" of the British military situation in Crete. They said defenders of the island were near exhaustion as a result of the physical and mental strain of incessant day and night bombing since the battle first began.

They added that the worn British soldiers, only slightly reinforced, have faced fresh units of German paratroopers every day.

It was estimated, however, that the Germans have lost between 10,000 and 12,000 men killed, wounded or taken prisoner since the invasion was launched and in addition have lost nearly 300 transport and combat planes.

APPEALS FOR DATA ABOUT ONE-ROOM SCHOOL HOUSES

Edmund Cocks, George School, Eager To Obtain Historical Facts

PHOTOGRAPHS HELD

In a letter directed to the presidents of the public school boards throughout Bucks County an appeal is made for data concerning the one-room school houses in Bucks County. The letter, signed by Edmund Cocks, of George School, reads as follows:

George School, Penna., May 8, 1941.

"Efforts are being made to preserve for posterity a record of the one-room schools in Bucks County. This attempt to commit in writing authentic data concerning these institutions of early education is prompted by a desire to establish associations in a changing system of youth instruction.

"Most helpful co-operation already is forthcoming in the taking of photographs of these buildings. As an added feature it is considered important to have the element of human relations made a partner in the project.

"If you feel free to lend your assistance in this endeavor, will you kindly enlist the aid of some responsible person in your township to gain such facts as may be pertinent for later reading? The writer plans to arrange the material gathered from all sources into one volume.

"It is respectfully suggested that the

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Why Did He Take It?

Washington, May 27.

THERE is general recognition, outside of his own State as well as inside, that Mr. LaGuardia has made a first-class Mayor of New York city. Accordingly, the suggestion of his close friend, the able Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Adolf Berle, that he be nominated by the Young Democrats of New York for a third term had a very favorable response in the country.

THE New York Mayoralty is so big a job that it is of more than local concern. To some degree, anyhow, it is of national importance that there should be no sharp deteriora-

Much interest was shown in the disposal of approximately a dozen quilts, and they brought from $1 to $5 each. Rag carpet went to the highest bidder for 20 to 50 cents a yard, and electric lamps from $3 to $5. An electric refrigerator brought $30.

A small hand wagon sold at what was considered an unusually high figure, $15, and a large pile of firewood was purchased for $15.

Mrs. Myers, who has sold her property to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swartz, of this place, in the near future will take up residence in Souderton.

The New Britain borough school held its commencement exercises in the chapel of the New Britain Baptist Church last evening, when six boys and one girl received diplomas.

The main address was given by Rev. M. M. Hostette, pastor of the Doylestown Presbyterian Church, and Edwin A. Webster, president of the school board, presented the diplomas.

Members of the graduating class are: Ann Webster, Clifford Clymer, Albert Gilbert, George Orr, Robert West, Alexander Belagh and Philip Diduck.

Levi S. Moyer, who for more than 50 years has been engaged in farming near Chalfont was the guest of honor on Sunday at an informal family gathering at his home in honor of his 77th birthday anniversary.

The affair, attended by almost 50 persons, was arranged by his children. At noon a dinner was served and included among the guests were his brothers and their wives.

A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William G. Moyer, formerly of Springfield township, Mr. Moyer for many years has taken an active interest in the affairs of his community. He was one of the first members of the Chalfont Grange, and for some years was a member of the New Britain Township School Board.

He is the father of ten children, and, with the exception of one, Dr. Theodore R. Moyer, who resides in Baltimore, Md., all were in attendance at the gathering.

Memory of Deceased Members Of P. O. S. of A. is Honored

The May meeting of Philadelphia-Bucks District, P. O. S. of A., was held Monday night in the room of Washington Camp, No. 394, Wissinoming.

The annual district memorial service was held with past district president, Reese E. Greer, and the Rev. John Norris, of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Bustleton, in charge of the service. The Rev. Norris is a member of Bustleton Camp, and also chaplain of the fifth district, American Legion.

A chair was draped in black in front of the lodge altar, this representing the departed brothers. During the service a roll call of the departed dead of the last year was read. The following members of Washington Camp, No. 789, Bristol, were included: George Phipps, William Hellings, and George Foster.

During this service, the Rev. Norris made a fitting address. Some of the points brought out by him were: "Memorial Day was started as a day in which the veterans of the Civil War decorated the graves of their departed comrades, and lived with them in memory."

"The men who gave their lives for the country gave them willingly and voluntarily. They sacrificed their all. We should give and sacrifice for our God, our Country and our members and friends. The man who does most in any field gives more than he receives, he sacrifices."

In speaking of death, the Rev. Norris said: "It is something we cannot escape. We cannot be good citizens if we are afraid to die. There are three comforts in death: 1. It is a great leveler. After 15 years, the rich man, poor man, prince or king are all level; we forget the distinction. 2. It is a great purifier. We forget all the bad habits, weaknesses, etc., of the departed and only remember the good points. The longer a friend is dead, the purer we have him in our memory. 3. It exalts us. Death enshrines us to our brothers and friends."

In concluding, the Rev. Norris said: "If we have faith in Jesus Christ, death is a beginning, because it carries us to our Heavenly Home to dwell with Him."

Following the meeting, refreshments and a social time were enjoyed.

AXIS AIR LINES

The extent to which the Germans and Italians have gained control of air transport in the Latin American republics is explained by Oswald Ryan, a member of the United States civil aeronautics board. He points out that both Germany and Italy have subsidized air lines in territory which lacks the business to support them.

Their purpose, he says, is mili-tary and political. Apparently they are looking to the time when they will invade the New World through some South American country in which they have prepared a hos-pitable welcome.

The warning is timely and im-portant. But it will not be forgotten that two years ago Col. Frank Knox, now Secretary of the Navy, said, fol-lowing an air tour of South Amer-ica, practically the same thing. On May 22, 1939, he said in the course of a review of this country's Western Hemisphere defense: "Today there is a fleet of German planes operating on the Amazon river in South Amer-ica, where river traffic will not pay for gasoline and oil consumed. This fleet of planes is within five hours' flying time of the Panama Canal."

The question is thus not whether this country knows—and for many months has known—what is going on, but what it is going to do about it. Ryan declares that "we must eliminate the Axis from South American aviation." It is expected, that his appeal will evoke a response that will immediately be reflected in American policy.

This country is improving its re-lations with the Latin American re-publics, but it must go farther to-ward displacing the subsidized ad-vantages which have been installed by the Axis powers.

MISS LINGER TO WED

After the immediate excitement of Whirlaway's victory in the Ken-tucky Derby had subsided, the big-gest post-race story was that of a young college boy's 1,500-mile mo-torcycle jaunt to court a beautiful young lady whom he had seen in Louisville. One Earl Lee Archer, University of Arkansas sophomore, set the nation's romantic heart a-thumping by his pursuit of Mary Helen Linger all the way from the Derby town to her home in Kansas City.

Mr. Archer, as far as is known never actually obtained an introduc-tion to the beautiful Miss Linger, although he put-putted across sev-eral states, waved at her from his two-wheeled machine and handed her a note as she drove by. After spending a night in jail—for grati-lodging—Mr. Archer properly made his intentions known to her father. He then went back to college.

Miss Linger has just announced she is ready to wed. Not to the motorcycle swain. She will marry one John West, who has arrived in Kansas City from, appropriately, the West. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Linger and Mr. West have been affianced since last summer, and Mr. West, upon reading of the affair, motorcycle in newspapers in San Francisco where he works, decide to go to Kansas City as soon as possible and forthwith take the nuptial vows.

All this appears to mark the end of the romantic post-Derby interlude. But the final coup de grace to Mr. Archer's hopes, if any still survive, is the revelation that Mr. West is a former Stanford University heavy-weight boxing champion.

SYNOPSIS

Anthony Worth, Jr., out of a job and really in need of one, is in-darned annoyed when—on a park bench—he reads of the gala life of madcap Marie Schuyler, current Glamour Girl. Her doings during a Mediterranean yachting trip are keeping press cables busy, if not burning. Marie is entertaining some elements of Old World so-ciety (and what passes for it) on a luxury cruise. Her guests include Felix Norheim, Marchese Lippi and others. . . . Tony Worth returns to the modest room of his old friend, Ed Keeler, now in govern-ment service. Ed tells him that the distinguished Judge Fairchild is looking for a capable man to do some "special service." Before call-ing on the judge, Keeler and Worth visit the former's "Chief," who ex-plains that this "special service" is to protect the much publicized Schuyler heiress from adventurers, some of whom are under Uncle Sam's suspicion. The "Chief" men-tions "a clearing house of subver-sive activities," probably on or near the Riviera.

CHAPTER THREE

A network of electric wires seemed to contact in Tony's brain, throwing out confused cracklings and flames. The Chief eyed him thoughtfully. "Any organization like that needs plenty of ready money," he said. "They'd have to be solid before war breaks out in Europe. Because, in the event of war, and without signal results to show here, they'd lose their present backing."

Tony jumped to his feet. "I got you. Enemy interests in this coun-try are the same. Once they under-mine the people's judgment, they expect to swing the government into a dictatorship or an alliance. Once that's done, they share the spoils, whether we join in a European war or not."

"Right, son." The quiet man spoke softly. "Now consider this. Miss Schuyler inherited many mil-lions from her mother. In August, two months from now, she comes into many more millions." He added, "She represents untold value, and both she and her large fortune could be used in various ways. She could be kidnapped by an international group and held for ransom, or—quite innocently—she could marry one of its members. I don't think that's too far-fetched."

"She ought to be protected, then—" Tony burst out and stopped. Ed Keeler took him by the arm. "We couldn't get one of our men on her yacht, as a guest," he re-marked.

The Chief rose, standing spare and gray against the window. "Worth has the idea." To Tony he said, "I may be wrong, of course. But if I'm not, the girl is in danger. I want you to watch Felix Norheim, the Marchese Lippi—and there's a woman else," he paused. "She's a someone who calls herself the Baroness Lascar."

"Is she on the yacht?" Tony asked eagerly.

The quiet man answered, "We've been informed that she's sailing on the ship you'll be on Saturday—the Cent de Savoia." He took Tony's hand in a warm, friendly grip. "Good luck to you, lad! Nothing of this, naturally, to Judge Fairchild." Then he sat down at his desk, in-terest again on the folder. He didn't look up as they left.

That evening in Greenwich, Tony Worth and three elderly gentlemen were sitting over a delectable un-blended champagne, when the tele-phone rang. The bell sounded faintly from a room beyond. Silence fell in the dining room, as if an underlying tension had come to the surface. Tony, on the point of say-ing something, refrained.

As the F. B. I. man had predicted, Worth found himself accepted in a short, preliminary conference be-fore the excellent dinner. Henry Armstrong, noted banker, and Wil-liam Sears, corporation tycoon, evi-dently depended on Judge Fair-child's opinion where their reckless ward was concerned. They were prepared, they told Tony, to deal handsomely with anyone who could relieve their minds of justified anx-iety. He could count on them for all expenses, a hundred dollars a week, and an extra bonus of a thousand if Marie consented to come home be-fore committing any irreparable folly.

These terms passed through Tony's mind in the few moments the butler was gone to answer the telephone. But now he needed no per-suasion of a financial sort. The whole affair had taken on a differ-ent character since his talk that morning with Ed Keeler's "Chief." He wanted only to be off.

Handing the 'phone to Tony, the Judge said: "Your service begins now"

Then the butler was back in the door, announcing, "Miss Schuyler's on the 'phone, Judge."

It was as if, by their thought, they had summoned her. They broke into exclamations. Where was the child? When had she ar-rived? Tony felt suddenly left out. He might have known that Marie would do exactly the opposite of what everyone expected.

Judge Fairchild rose, years drop-ping from his shoulders. "We'll soon know where she is."

The Judge took up the receiver, his eyes bright under their tufted white.

"Hello—hello—Marie? Where are you, my dear?" He listened for a long time, his color fading. The pince-nez clipped on his aquiline nose gave the only gleam.

"No—NO, Marie—I beg of you to do nothing you'll regret." He put a shaking hand over the mouth-piece, and turned a stricken face to his friends.

"We were mistaken," he said. "She isn't back. The yacht's in the Bay of Phaleron, near Athens. No overseas telephone there. She flew in Mr. Norheim's plane to Naples, to tell me"—His voice, so resonant and judicious on the bench, was thin now and frightened—"to tell me—" she was talking to her favorite guardian. "Don't go tragic on me, darling," she was coaxing so sweetly and intimately that he warmth seemed blended with the scent of June roses in the room.

But her next words weren't so easy to take. "I'm crazy about Nino. I really mean it this time R. F." Tony glanced at Robert Fairchild, the nice old gentleman who seemed so fond of, sitting back in his chair, the starch gone out of him. It was such a shame!

Tony listened some more, wonder-ing what anyone could do or say to stop her as she prattled on: "We're having the most thrilling time dashing from Greece to Italy to catch you at dinner. You're not shocked, are you, that I'm spending the night on a seaplane with the boy friend? It's past one now. We'll be back in Phaleron for break-fast—we haven't visited Athens yet, but it's only ten minutes in a car and Nino says—"

Banker Armstrong consulted his watch. "She's talked about thirty dollars worth already," he grum-bled. Capitalist Sears plucked at his gray mustache, and the Judge leaned forward, his blue-veined hands clamped on his knees. They were all watching Worth's face for every flicker of expression. But be-yond a tightening of his black eye-brows, Tony gave nothing away. There was nothing yet to give.

ARE WE WELL-FED? NEED STRONG PEOPLE FOR A STRONG NATION

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

Are we, the people of the United States, well-fed?

That's a question that thinking men and women are asking these days. For no nation achieves total strength unless its citizens are well-fed. Strong people make strong nations. And strong and alert people are built by abundant and well-balanced diets.

Looking at the facts from a recent nation-wide study of the diets of families in the U. S., we see that about one-fourth of the families are apparently living on diets that can be rated good. That is, their diets furnish the kind and quantity of food needed to maintain the body, plus a margin of safety that enables them to stand up under the stresses and strains of living.

More than a third of our families are getting fair diets. That is, these families are getting just enough to keep them going, plus a slight margin of safety or no margin at all.

The rest are getting diets that should definitely be rated poor. In one or more ways their diets are not furnishing even the minimum of all the food the body needs for good health.

What does this mean—this having millions of people living on diets below the safety line for good nutrition?

It means that some of these people are hungry. It means that some of them have well-defined deficiency diseases such as beriberi, scurvy, anemia, and pellagra.

But more than that it means that others having none of these clear-cut symptoms are getting inadequate diets, suffering from them, without even knowing what is wrong. Inadequate diets may not put us to bed, but they can destroy our sense of well-being, our joy in being alive and well and able to do our work. They take their toll in chronic fatigue, in shifting aches and pains, and in certain kinds of digestive disturbances. They prevent a child's normal growth and development. And they lower natural resistance to infection.

Where are they—all these people who are not well-fed?

They're in every State in the Union and in every community in every State. As a rule, more of the ill-fed may be found in the lower income classes than in the higher—more in the larger families than in the smaller—and more in cities than on farms.

What are the reasons so many of us are ill-fed?

Sometimes it's not having enough to eat. More often it's not having the right kinds of foods. Good management of a limited food budget and home-grown "protective" foods can often make the difference between fair or poor diets and diets that are good.

What are these important protective foods that every diet must have?

They are the foods that protect against acute dietary diseases, that help to lift bodies from a low to a higher level of good health.

The protective foods are milk, green leafy vegetables, eggs, whole grain cereals and bread, and citrus fruits. See that every member of your family is getting a good supply of these protective foods.

Recent studies show that the Nation needs to consume at least 10 to 20 per cent more milk—10 to 25 per cent more butter—and 25 to 70 per cent more tomatoes and citrus fruits, and about twice as much of the leafy, green, and yellow vegetables.

Believe Navy May Establish Safe Sea Lane

Washington, May 28—Diplomatic quarters in Washington today believed the American Navy is about to be ordered to establish, by force if necessary, a safe sea lane across the North Atlantic and to the Red Sea to assure the flow of war supplies to the British. This belief was based in President Roosevelt's declaration last night that the U. S. intends to "actively resist" Hitler's "every attempt to gain control of the seas," and the President's announcement that "all additional measures necessary to deliver the goods will be taken."

Convoys and, if necessary, resort to the use of force by American warships to safeguard the ocean life line to Britain was seen as clearly implied by the President.

Deceased veterans from 14 States have been brought to Bucks county for burial.

"In the cemeteries throughout the county," he added, "it is noticeable how well they are maintained and at this season present a splendid appearance. Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Our Heavenly Father, whose love sent Jesus Christ into the world, grant that the life of Christ might become effective in our lives, that we, like Him, might be motivated by love; that our aim might be to assist, rather than to destroy; that our desire might be to lift, rather than to depress. Enable us to pattern our lives after His, that the community in which we live might be made better because we have passed this way. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

GRAND THEATRE

A gay, sparkling comedy with plenty of laughs makes its local debut today when Warner Bros. new film, "Here Comes Happiness" opens at the Grand Theatre. The film starring Mildred Coles, Edward Norris and Richard Ainley, is a mirthful story.

When Jessica Vance, played by Mildred Coles, leaves her rich surroundings because she can't bear the thought of marrying Jelliffe Blaine, played by Richard Ainley, her mother, played by Marjorie Gateson, becomes frantic. Jessica's father, portrayed by Russell Hicks, agrees with his daughter's view of Jelliffe.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Ever since 20th Century-Fox announced that it had purchased "Tobacco Road," the most discussed play of our time, the question has been pondered—how would it be brought to the screen? Who would play the difficult character roles such as Jeeter Lester, Sister Bessie and all the rest?

But trade secrets have a way of leaking out and word has sifted through, the gist of it being—great as the play was, the screen version is even greater! Local movie-goers will have their opportunity to decide when "Tobacco Road" starts its engagement today at the Bristol Theatre.

EDGELY A. C. TAKES TIGHT HOLD ON 2ND PLACE IN LEAGUE

Badenhausen Nine Loses To

TRIPLE COPS THE GAME

Felkner's Bat Knocks Out A
Three-Bagger With Two on Bases

EDDINGTON, May 28—The Edgely A. C. took undisputed possession of second place in the Bristol Suburban League last evening by whipping the Badenhausen nine, 7-4, on Turner's field.

It took a long triple by Stan Felkner to cop the game for the DeKoyers. Coming to the plate in the initial frame, Felkner found Leinheiser and Dewnap on base. He connected with one of Minster's pitches and sent it into deep left for the three bags. He then scored on an error to account for the Edgelyites' fourth marker of the inning.

The winning moundman was Ralphie Linck who held the boiler-makers to five hits. Only a three-bagger from the bat of Norman Tettemer spoiled an easier win for Linck. Tettemer's three-base ply scored Murphy and Minster in the third canto. Ludwig singled Tettemer home for the third run of the inning.

Both Linck and Harry Minster struck out six batters. However, Minster was solved for nine safe blows with Dewnap, Felkner and Leigh getting a pair each. Leigh continued his slugging by connecting for both a double and triple and starting rallies in the third and fifth innings.

The other scheduled game between Fleetwings and Diamond Sporting Goods team was forfeited to the latter team when Fleetwings failed to place nine players on the field. A practice game was played with the airplane workers ahead, 4-1, when the game was called.

BRISTOL METHODISTS TIE WITH NEWPORTVILLE

Bristol Methodist and Newportville Community softball teams battled to a 4-4 tie in extra innings last evening at Newportville. Too many errors almost caused the downfall of Bristol.

Headley, first man up, hit to right field, the ball got away from the fielder and before it could be retrieved the runner had crossed the plate to score. Bristol tied it up in the first part of the third on successive doubles by Ludwig and Hampton. In the last half of the third, Newportville scored three runs on four straight errors and a single by Cameron. From then on Bristol played good ball.

Scoring a run in the fourth and fifth innings, Bristol tied the score in the seventh. With two down "Hystie" Grimes was purposely walked. He then stole second. Molden who had walked on two previous occasions, hit a sharp single to score Grimes with the tying run.

NEXT AUTO RACE AT LANGHORNE TO BE JUNE 15

The great Langhorne Speedway, second only to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, has stepped aside to permit drivers and car owners to concentrate on the famous Indianapolis Memorial Day classic.

Due to the shortage of racing automobiles resulting from the national defense program, Langhorne will revise its schedule of every-Sunday racing.

The next major classic on the world's fastest mile speedway, near here, will be held Sunday, June 15th, when the top Indianapolis winners battle for the richest purse of the Langhorne season in a 100-mile championship race.

The important race has been scheduled three weeks hence to give drivers the necessary time to rebuild their motors and the track management time to recondition the speed-burned surface after three weeks of the most exciting races ever seen here.

Lucky Teter, owner of the famous mile oval, went to Indianapolis this week to sign the drivers for the Langhorne 100-mile championship classic as fast as they come over the finish line.

The favorites in the Memorial Day race have promised their entries for the season's most important grind out side of Indianapolis. Ted Horn, ready to battle for the victory voted for him at Indianapolis, already has signed his entry, and other drivers fast lining up include Jole Chitwood, Bob Sall, Everett Saylor, Tony Willman, Bill Holland and a host of the nation's top-ranking drivers.

With the stellar field already having set the fastest pace ever seen at Langhorne before the largest crowds to consistently patronize the mile oval, more world's records are predicted for the June 15th championship. Hot off the Indianapolis speedway, the veterans of Langhorne competition will — they promise — make it "tough going" for the Indianapolis stars. And therein is the drivers' promise that the fans will see the most exciting races at the most reckless pace ever attained at Langhorne.

PLASTIC COFFEE

SAO PAULO, Brazil — (INS) — In a move designed to do away with burning of surplus coffee, of which an average of 7,000,000 bags annually has gone up in smoke during the last decade, completion of the first of a series of plants for converting coffee into plastics is expected here within a few weeks.

BUSES REPLACE STREET CAR

PORTLAND, Me. — (INS) — Buses have completely replaced street railroads in Portland, after 78 years of service by horse and electric cars. The first horse-cars in Greater Portland were used on Spring street in 1863. This was the first line motorized when the shift to buses was started two years ago. The horse-cars were completely replaced by electric cars in 1895.

latter has been a great many things in the course of his political career, a Democrat is not one of them.

—O—
HOWEVER, since the New Deal began, party leaders have been so loosened that it is not surprising to find this Administration, which still calls itself Democratic, preparing to support a Republican, a Socialist or an Independent against a regular Democrat. It has done so more than once in the past eight years. In the case of Mr. LaGuardia, it would appear amply justified in so doing this year. What is surprising is, first, that, under the circumstances, Mr. LaGuardia should have been named by the President as head of the new National Office of Civilian Defense, and, second, that he should have accepted.

—O—
THIS is not to reflect upon his qualifications for the job, nor upon Mr. Roosevelt's belief in thinking him qualified. His qualifications are conceded and can be left out of the discussion. The real question is, How is he going to do two big jobs well at the same time? The answer, of course, is that he cannot do them both well at the same time. Nor could anyone else. The New York Mayoralty is a full-time job if ever there was one. It is generally regarded as second in importance only to the Presidency. Looming ahead for the Mayor of New York are immensely enhanced problems of finance, of taxation, of labor, of relief, of housing, of transportation, of crime control. To ask a man burdened with the immense routine of the Mayor's office, and confronted with this additional strain, to take on another job, requiring thought, planning, concentration and executive ability, just does not seem sensible.

—O—
IN the case of Mayor LaGuardia it seems even less sensible when it is recalled that he already is chairman of the joint Canadian and United States Commission charged with the job of co-ordinating the defense activities of the two countries. Also, he is the head of the Association of Mayors of the United States, which requires at least a little time. On top of all this, Mr. Roosevelt now names Mr. LaGuardia as head of the home defense movement, and the announcement is made that the gives him a good many million dollars of defense funds with which to operate and a large amount of organization work to do.

—O—
NOW, it is not uncomplimentary to Mayor LaGuardia to say that he cannot do this new Federal job well without slighting his job as Mayor, or that he cannot do justice to himself and the people who elected him as Mayor without slighting the home-defense job. Certainly Mr. LaGuardia knows that. Certainly Mr. Roosevelt should know it. Certainly everybody who stops to think about what the Mayor has now taken on knows it. Why, then, has he taken on this new job? No one in Washington is quite clear about it. Of one thing they are sure—and that is that Mr. LaGuardia turned it down twice and finally took it because of the personal insistence of the President.

—O—
IT was believed in Washington that the Mayor would very much have liked the post of Secretary of War.

It was also believed that he would have jumped at the job of being real boss of the defense organization. For either of these jobs he gladly would have given up any idea of running again for Mayor. But he was not offered either one. Instead, great pressure was put on him by the President to take over this home defense business, which is not at all to his taste. And he obviously took it with the understanding that it would not interfere with his running a third time for Mayor if desired.

—O—
THE best evidence of this understanding was Mr. Berle's speech. It is not hard to reconcile Mr. Roosevelt's insistence on Mr. LaGuardia taking this position with the general pattern of confusion and inefficiency characteristic of this Administration. It is more or less typical of the White House system. What is hard to understand is why Mr. LaGuardia let himself be pressed into taking over this home-defense job, which has a slight stuffed-shirt flavor and, unless he puts an awful lot of time and energy in it, will be more a publicity proposition than anything else. Better than anyone, Mr. LaGuardia knows he cannot put that kind of time and energy into it without letting the people of New York down as Mayor. The baffling question is, Why did he take it?
